SACRAMENT, n. f. [sacrament, Fr. sacramentum, Latin.]

1. An oath; any ceremony producing an obligation.

2. An outward and visible sign of an inward and spiritual grace.

As often as we mention a sacrament, it is improperly understood; for in the writings of the ancient fathers all articles which are peculiar to Christian faith, all duties of religion containing that which sense or natural reason cannot of itself discern, are most commonly named sacraments; our restraint of the word to some few principal divine ceremonies, importeth in every such ceremony two things, the substance of the ceremony itself, which is visible; and besides that, somewhat else more secret, in reference whereunto we conceive that ceremony to be a sacrament. Hooker.

3. The eucharist; the holy communion.

Ten thousand French have ta'en the sacrament
To rive their dangerous artillery
Upon no Christian foul but English Talbot. Shakespeare. H. VI.

As we have ta'en the sacrament,
We will unite the white rose with the red. Shakespeare. R. III.

Before the famous battle of Cressly, he spent the greatest part of the night in prayer; and in the morning received the sacrament, with his son, and the chief of his officers. Addison.

SACRAMENTAL, adj. [sacramental, Fr. from sacrament.] Constituting a sacrament; pertaining to a sacrament.

To make complete the outward substance of a sacrament, there is required an outward form, which form sacramental elements receive from sacramental words. Hooker.

The words of St. Paul are plain; and whatever interpretation can be put upon them, it can only vary the way of the sacramental efficacy, but it cannot evacuate the blessing. Taylor.

SACRAMENTALLY, adv. [from sacramental.] After the manner of a sacrament.

My body is sacramentally contained in this sacrament of bread. Hall.

The law of circumcision was meant by God sacramentally to impress the duty of strict purity. Hammond.

To that meek man who well had sacrific'd. Milton.

SACRIFICE, n. f. [sacrificie, French; sacrificium, Latin.]

1. The act of offering to heaven.

God will ordain religious rites
Of sacrifice. Milton.

2. The thing offered to heaven, or immolated.

Upon such sacrifice
The gods themselves throw incense. Shakespeare. King Lear.

Go with me like good angels to my end,
And as the long divorce of steel falls on me,
Make of your prayers one sweet sacrifice,
And lift my soul to heav'n. Shakespeare.

Moloch besmear'd with blood
Of human sacrifice.
My life if thou preserv'st, my life
Thy sacrifice shall be;
And death, if death must be my doom,
Shall join my soul to thee. Addison's Spectator.

3. Any thing destroyed, or quitted for the sake of something else.

4. Any thing destroyed.

SACRIFICER, n. f. [from sacrificie.] One who offers sacrifice; one that immolates.
